ECHOES

Echoes—
Soft and sighing,
Come reaching from afar,
Telling of sweet memories and Life Past.

The maze of youth unfolds—
Revealing deep chapters
    In the Biography of Time.

A line,
    A phrase,
A word or two,
    An episode
Of Life
    Retold.

I hear the echoes calling me—
Whispering an oft-said tale—
And reflected by the Light of a Thousand Yesterdays—
    I see the stream of life go
Flowing by again.

THE ALMANAC

SEWARD PARK HIGH SCHOOL

JUNE 1946

Dear Graduates:

It is a pleasant task for me to look back over the years you have spent here and draw up a balance sheet before the account is closed.

On the credit side, I note that eleven of you have earned 100 or more points for extra-curricular service to the school, and that an additional thirty-four have amassed 50 to 100 such points. These services cover a wide range from President of Arista to switchboard operator and constitute an impressive record for 12% of the seniors. The other 88% have less service to the school, but there are very few who gave none at all. Those few we shall have to enter on the debit side.

In another important part of your life here, namely scholarship, your account presents an excellent picture. I found in one official section alone twenty-three students whose average for four years of high school will be 85% or better. Of course, the red circle that marks failure does appear now and then on the cards, and as it can mean but a temporary setback, it is with hesitation that an entry is made debiting our accounts by a mere trifle.

Under my final subdivision, I find all entries made on the credit side, for here I am thinking of that vague and all-inclusive item called personality. For your cheerfulness, energy, loyalty, and good-will I mark you 100%.

I note, with continued pleasure, that you carry an ample reserve fund into which you dip from time to time to help the unfortunate young people of the war-torn countries. That reserve fund, upon which we have called in the past, is all that stands between hope and despair for the youth of less fortunate countries.

Now, it seems to me that this account proves that your class is in excellent condition, with a reasonable profit to add to your capital for whatever new ventures you will undertake.

It is a good thing occasionally to cast up accounts because it offers an opportunity to strengthen good points and eliminate weaknesses. If you will promise to take stock every now and then, and make the necessary adjustments, I can say goodbye and good luck for myself and for the faculty without doubt as to your eventual success.

Sincerely yours,

Victor Chankin

Four years ago, Seward Park opened its doors for us, a throng of boys and girls. The City had provided us with a beautiful building complete with the most modern equipment, and felt that it had done enough.

There was, however, one thing lacking. It was nothing tangible which could be ordered through the Supply Department. Rather it was something indefinable: something we call traditions and ideals. It is these which give a building its soul, which change it from a mere pile of bricks and cement into the personification of a beautiful ideal. In the years to come, we may forget the fastest way to the lunch room, or we may forget the exact location of the G.O. office. There are some things, however, which we can not forget, for they have left an indelible stamp upon our characters. They are forces which will ever cause us to remember those pleasant days spent here.

Some of our teachers, who have proven to be friends, shall forever serve as a symbol of guidance and help.

We have seen Seward at war and Seward at peace. Now with Seward at peace, we know that we have helped lay the foundation of the ideals and traditions of brotherhood and peace. We hope that we will be an inspiration to those entering Seward in coming years. As in the story of the legendary hero, Pygmalion, we have seen an ideal, which has become an integral part of our lives, come into being.

And so with pride and assurance, intermingled with a pang of sorrow, we say to those who are to follow us:

"To you . . .
We throw the torch
Be yours to hold it high."

ADELE DECKELBAUM

Dear Seniors:

One of the outstanding topics taught in Seward, is the subject of how groups can live together. We were taught that all people, regardless of race or creed, should have an opportunity for advancement. In a way, in spite of many faults, Seward is an example of how different racial groups can get along in harmony.

I wonder if you feel as frightened as I do to leave the peaceful haven of Seward and face the outside world, a world which is full of racial hatreds, economic conflicts and wars. Will we, when confronted with the many unsolved problems of the world, have the strength to apply the lessons taught in Seward to our everyday life? Will we remember before we call names that although the person may look different, think differently, we are all brothers under the skin? Did our teams look for the color of future players or did they choose boys according to their ability to play?

Teachers in Seward have given us the basic truths in the hope that we will not sleep while forces of prejudices get strong, but will be able to recognize these forces and find in our way the method to fight them.

One way that we can gain certain rights is by organizing for action. When we are equipped in a few years with the power to vote, we must make sure to put into office men and women who will strive to make our system benefit all of the people. Above all, let's live up to the high standards Seward has set up for us.

Although we are a little scared to face the outside world, we can find comfort by making a solemn vow that the only war we fight is a war against poverty, would-be fascists, and those who sow the seeds of racial and religious discrimination.

Sincerely,

EUGENIA GRIFFITH

PAUL!

★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆

"All through the day, I dream about tonight," were the strains of music pouring forth from the radio, and there sat Linda, staring into space and thinking of those words. Yes, tonight was the night of the Prom. "I can't believe it's come at last!" said Linda, thinking aloud. "I don't really believe it's true!"

That night everything was just too perfect for words. The moon was full; the stars were shining brilliantly; the sky just seemed to glow; the air was fresh with May breezes; and Linda was happy and excited. While under the shower she couldn't help but recapture some of the events that led to her first formal . . .

"It all started way back in seventh term, when I hadn't started thinking of the prom. I always did have a soft spot in my heart for Paul. It seemed that whatever theme I wrote in English, it always had something about Paul. Paul, coming into class would generally greet me with a 'Hi, beautiful,' and a broad smile which would instantly display his shining white teeth and dimples. Oh how I thrilled to that! One morning, walking through the hall, Paul quite casually remarked, 'Would you like to go to the Prom with me?' 'Why, Paul, I'd love to go.' I answered, flattered at such an early invitation and yet thinking he was just joshing about the whole thing . . ."

"Well," thought Linda, still in the tub "that certainly feels as though it were a long time ago, and I guess I didn't know whether to take it seriously or not. I'd better hurry up, it's getting late. But yet I can't help thinking about the whole incident." Linda continued dressing. She got into her formal and looked into the mirror and was startled by what she saw. It couldn't be Linda looking so exquisite in her dainty blue gown. Her hair, her make-up, her gown and her accessories of gold looked just right. Her family and friends were grouped around her "ooohing" and "aaahing." She looked like something out of a fairy book. Thus while she stood gazing upon herself she began turning the clock back again . . .

"At last I was a Senior! Those days when the senior pins came; that first senior dance, and the senior hats, and oh, just everything that happens in a senior term! Finally I began thinking about the Prom. Paul hadn't been acting very friendly lately, and he's never mentioned the prom since that morning in the hall. Could it really be that he had been kidding? True, I thought so then and it didn't seem to matter much, but now, Oh! how I wish that he'd ask me again so that then I'd be sure he's taking me. I knew all of Paul's friends had already asked their girls. Donald was taking Sue, Richard was going with Jeanne and Me! Who was taking me! I was completely disillusioned; when one of Paul's friends asked me to go with him to the prom. I was almost tempted to accept, but quite humbly I answered no, hoping against hope that Paul might ask me. Things lagged, and Paul behaved the same, with that usual indifference towards me.

"One evening while in the midst of my homework, the telephone rang. I ran to answer it and was amazed at the voice at the other end. It was Paul! What a pleasant, but shocking surprise. 'Don't forget Linda, the big night is just three weeks from tonight. I hope you haven't forgotten my invitation to the Prom?' I thought my heart would never stop pounding. I thought I'd never be able to answer, when unhesitantly and cheerful I replied 'Why Paul, how could I have ever forgotten'; it had happened at last. . . .

"And now, here it was just three weeks later, and here I was, listening to the doorbell, and my 'man of the moment' to arrive. In he walked, looking oooh so handsome, standing so erect and proud in his formal outfit of a white dinner jacket, black trousers, and a black bow-tie. 'Who wouldn't be proud of such a fellow,' I thought to myself. Paul walked in and handed me a corsage of red roses and a white orchid, and he just stared at me while I put them on. Later when we walked out he complimented me and my formal attire and told me that he was completely enthralled by my appearance. We went to the prom and had a wonderful time.

"As all good things must soon come to an end, this one was no exception. Saying good-night to Paul, I couldn't help but think 'All through the day. . . .'"

SONNET: ON HIS VISION

"When I consider how my life is spent
Ere half my days, in this dark world and wide,
And that one talent which is death to hide—"

Milton

Can I who see life so near to my eyes
Reach out and grasp its greatly tangled strings
Which life eternal with its sorrow brings
Or be compelled to tell myself it lies?
Of those who see themselves so well that they
Ne'er care to look at sorrow and the pain
Lest death should seem too near and then again
Bury their heads and hide their eyes and pray.

Oh life! for whom the blind seem so to care
Will your voice ne'er sing a song that's free?
Ope wide your eyes and breathe eternal air
For your existence is so dear to me.
I reach for thee but thou art never there
Only death in the shadows can I see.

LAST WILL &

★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆

We of the Senior Class of June '46 being of sound mind, do hereby give and bequeath all our earthly property — namely:

To MISS ADLER: A song ("Stay as Sweet As You Are").

To MRS. BAYER: An electric eye on your classroom door, so you won't have to work so hard when you go out and come in to put the lights on History 3 and the Industrial Revolution.

To MR. BLOCK: A bigger and better office 116 with a built-in torture chamber.

To MISS BRAHDY: A syllabus that mentions rulers (So she can roll her rrr's).

To MR. BRAVERMAN: More oranges for his Solid Geometry and Trig classes.

To MR. CHANKIN: Our sympathy.

To MISS CHASNOFF: Our phoney alibis to be held for future hookey-players.

To MR. FRANK: An axe (So he can chop Seniors down.)

To MR. FREYER: An empty Pub Office (we're not kiddin').

To MISS JONAS: A plea for more exercises, but only after we graduate.

To MRS. KLINGER: A copy of the Folio and little Bernie Benstock.

To MISS LA PORTE: Une fenetre.

To MR. LEICHTLING: His raise and smaller Senior buttons (so he can have a well-balanced Senior Class).

To DR. LIEBERMAN: A straight razor.

★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ ☆

To MR. LILLING: Students who will laugh at his jokes.

To MR. LINCH: The key to the Senior office. (We really didn't mind that you moved in.)

To MR. I. MANDELL: An aspirin and a glass of water. (Because we've been such a headache.)

To MISS MEKIBEL: A new typewriter and a more comfortable Senior office to chatter in.

To MR. MILETSKY: We leave Mr. LILLING.

To DR. SCHLEIFER: A class where getting answers isn't like pulling teeth.

To MRS. SCHRANK: A season pass to the Good Will Hour.

To MR. SHELLANS: Our sympathy.

To MRS. SHUBIN: Our applause. (We heard the Band, too.)

To MRS. STILLER: Crossed fingers and smelling salts for Class Day.

To DR. STOLZENBERG: Silence.
Silence
Silence . . . (I cannot tell a lie. I wrote Silence only 999,999,997 times.)

To MISS WRIGHT: We leave you MR. KLEIN, to be held in trust for future Seniors to swoon over.

Good Old Essex Tech

Strike out! Set! Touchdown! Splash! Touch! Hit the Cinders! With an S, with an E——!

Seward Sports— How well we recall the great thrills we felt watching our friends playing with the type of sportsmanship and stamina which Seward training and environment create.

It warms the heart to remember how in our traditional Thanksgiving game, we defeated Stuyvesant 36—0 with the plays led by Pagano, number 31. That was in 1943, the last football game the senior class had an opportunity to see. As Football was part of our school life, we couldn't let it go without a struggle. To this day, we remember the fateful September 17, when the students of Seward called a strike and showed sincerity in their belief to have more football and less school. Although football had to wait until this term, when football again is being reorganized, the memory of the team is dearly cherished, and we hope that the new team will bring Seward to the fore once again.

On the diamond, Seward has produced outstanding players as Pennachio, who had a tryout with the New York Giants, Jameson, and Santiago, still one of the Seward nine, who maintains one of the best strikeout records Seward has had in recent years.

During our stay we have seen the "Essex 9" play some top notch games, and get second place in the P.S.A.L. standings. It was due to the efforts of coaches Brown and Zipper, and Seward's purchases of Booster Buttons, that the team could show off its stuff.

Stepping indoors for awhile, we feel the spirit of those who have made Basketball Seward's greatest sport. Such names as Jameson, Novitsky, Lewis and Charles are but a few who have made the East Side, Home of Essex Tech, the birthplace of great basketball players. These are some who invaded the field of sports and are bringing glory to Seward. We must with all appreciation take off our hats to coach Henry Cohen, the heart and soul of Seward Basketball. We have followed the quintet to the Garden, and we know that this will become a permanent habit.

Taking a dip into a cool pool of water, we find Coach Wraldsden Aquamen. During our course in Seward, this activity reached full glory and continues to do so. Such "fish" as Roesch, Moroff and Sluses have conquered the swimming pool and carried Essex Tech to the top. In swimming as well as in every other major school sport, Seward has had more than its share of record makers and medal collectors.

Stepping into a mask and jacket, we thrust into the graceful sport of aching bones and flashing foils. Athletes such as Gorlan, Sierra, and Rhuland have shown fencing to be a skillful sport requiring speed, stamina, and co-ordination of the mind and muscle. Rhuland won third place last year in the P.S.A.L. individuals against stiff competition, and Gorlan is today Captain of the N.Y.U. Fencing team. Colleges have looked to us as a school which can really turn out fencers.

As we trot along the cinders, we feel the breeze created by Coach Tuttle's Mercurymen, a team which has been recently rejuvenated after a period of hibernation due to the lack of a director. Among this team, we find experienced teachers. We are looking to fast results from the team and expect to hear of Charley Dinkins and his four-minute mile (are we expecting too much from Charley)?

And of course, at every significant Seward game we find the blue and white organizers of Seward's unending morale, the Cheering Squad.

Our senior class is represented in Seward sports by:

S. Fisher	8-1	Swimming Team
A. Gaiptman	8-5	Track Team
A. Gould	8-1	Basketball Team
M. Lapin	8-1	Fencing Team
J. Lenko	8-3	Swimming Team
A. Schneider	8-5	Fencing Team
E. Schoenfeld	8-7	Swimming Team
B. Stein	8-3	Baseball Team
L. Weinberg	8-1	Basketball Team
E. Zaslow	8-3	Baseball Team

We know that we could not outline all of the many stars and incidents which have been produced during the past 4 years at Seward, but we all know who they are and what they did and we are deeply grateful.

And so seniors, carry on the great tradition of Seward, stamina, tolerance, and fair play, which have shown Seward to be the outstanding disciple of Sportsmanship.

The Arista

The Arista of Seward Park High School, under the capable leadership of Mrs. M. Bayer, has come to mean more than a little Blue and White pin. Arista represents the highest 2% of the student body in the fields of Character, Scholarship, and Service.

It is fitting that character take an important part in the requirements for Arista, for without character, Arista itself would have but little meaning. Character presents a true picture of every individual under careful study.

Scholarship is important too, for scholarship is merely the returned dividends on an investment of hard work.

Service to the school in its many offices, publications, clubs, and other organizations is also necessary for Arista members as well as the school.

This term the Arista carried out a program of being student advisors to lower termers as well as helping out in the library and many offices of the school. Arista members have helped in their own way to help Seward. They will uphold its integrity in the outside world.

CLASS DAY SONG

(To the tune of "Laughing on the Outside")

We seniors now are grieving
'Cause we'll soon be leaving,
Leaving dear old Seward High.
We've had a lot of gay times
Four years of work and play times
And now it's time to say "good-bye"

The teachers and the classrooms
Basketball and band tunes
Cutting cards from "one-sixteen"
We never shall forget them
Our hearts will never let them
Be driven from our memory

Now we know it's time to go
To leave our dear Seward Park High
But in here deep, the memories creep
Of four years that have flown by

So we always will remember
With a feeling tender
Friends and teachers that we knew
We hope that we can own up
To the school in which we've grown up
And Seward, we'll remember you.
